Phishing, Pharming, otherwise Business Email Compromise.

It could happen to you... or has it already?

Email is undeniably today's preferred communication channel, connecting internal and external business entities. This also makes it the main vector for malicious activity.

- ## Email fraud on the rise

Domain spoofing is the most dangerous, yet less addressed fraud vector that could target an organization. Consumer frauds, online CEO impersonations, and employee phishing cost billions to government, private and public sector organizations.

- ## DMARC safeguards your email

Preventing email fraud saves time and money. DMARC blocks unauthorized email senders by filtering unwanted emails before they reach recipients. It also improves business email deliverability by making it easier for mail providers to discern between phishing attempts and legitimate marketing activities.

- ## Aligning with DMARC

SPF and DKIM are mostly familiar technologies, but neither of them can possibly protect you from spoofing or other misuse of your domain. The main control to observe and restrict email domain usage is DMARC. Therefore, DMARC is a must for every domain owner.

DMARC ensures prevention of loss revenue and damaged brand reputation.

Security
Protecting people from spam, fraud and phishing by prohibiting unauthorized use of your email domains.

Visibility
Offering insightful overview on who is sending email over the Internet using your email domain.

Deliverability
Using the same state-of-the-art technology as large enterprises use to send email.

Identifiability
Making it easy to identify emails among a huge number of DMARC-enabled recipients.
